

MAY START WORK ON HI ADDITION

Bids to Be Advertised to Be Received Nov. 8th,
Oberholtzer Says

Work on the addition to Tulsa's high school building will be started soon, according to E. M. Oberholtzer, superintendent of city schools. The board of education of the city schools has authorized that advertisement of bids on the addition to be received November 8. Plans and specifications have been drawn by George Winkler, architect of the old building. These have been approved by the building committee and the board of education.

Bond Market a Handicap.
The bonds for the addition to the high school were voted last spring, but on account of the Oklahoma law which requires bonds to be sold for par value and accrued interest, the board of education has been unable to sell the bonds because the best market has not been above 92.
Mr. Oberholtzer says the board has been very much handicapped on not being able to sell the bonds, and that it is using every effort to try to develop plans to get the new building so have decided to advertise for bids to ascertain the cost, then finance it through the bonds with the assistance of local financiers.

Students Crowded.
Merle C. Prunty, principal of the Tulsa high school, says that the increase in the high school this year is 20 per cent and he expects as great an increase next year. The present enrollment is 1,500 and the capacity of the building is 1,200. Mr. Prunty says if the addition is not ready next year, they cannot take care of the high school students who enter.

It is Mr. Oberholtzer's plan to get the building under construction as soon as possible in order to have it complete by the middle of next year. French and Spanish classes are being taught in the old armory on the Central grade school grounds at Fifth and Boston this year to relieve the congestion at the high school.

Gordon Elected Moderator.
Dr. R. S. Gordon, pastor of the Community church of Sand Springs and president emeritus of Kendall college, was elected moderator of the synod of the Presbyterian church at Oklahoma at the meeting at Blackwell, according to word received here Wednesday. The meeting convened Tuesday and will close Thursday.

Form Hoosier Club.
A Hoosier club was organized Wednesday evening by a group of 15 young people who claim Indiana as their native state. H. J. Scott was elected temporary chairman. A meeting of all native sons and daughters of Indiana will be called shortly.
